A Time for Thought

Lives are commemorated - deaths are recorded - families are united - memories are made more tangible - and love is undisguised. This is a cemetery.

Communities accord respect,
families bestow reverence, historians seek information and our heritage is thereby enriched.

Testimonies of devotion pride and remembrance are carved in stone to pay warm tribute to accomplishments and to the life - not death - of a loved one.

The cemetery is a homeland for the family memorials that are a sustaining source of comfort to the living.

The cemetery is a history of people - a perpetual record of yesterday and a sanctuary of peace and quiet today. A cemetery exists because every life is worth loving and remembering - always.

Great Glen Church dedicated to St Cuthbert

The church stands near the main Leicester to Market Harborough road at the north-east corner of the village. It consists of a chancel with a small north vestry, nave, north aisle, south porch, and west tower. It was almost entirely rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, in 1876.

The modern vestry contains two carved stones thought to be of pre-Conquest date, one perhaps of the 8th century. There is another fragment in the external wall of the north aisle near the doorway. Built into the south wall inside the porch is the 'Kobia' stone, so called because of the few letters of an inscription, which can be traced upon it. The circular font, for part of the 19th century abandoned in a neighbouring garden, is probably of the 12th century and there are fragments of original 12th century masonry in the reconstructed south doorway. In other respects the medieval church, which survived until 1876, appears to have been mainly of the late 13th and early 14th centuries. The tower is of four stages with a geometrical west window at the lowest stage and forking tracery to the belfry lights. Until c.1760 it was surmounted by a spire. Small openings to light the ringing chamber are probably 18th-century insertions. The clock dates from 1847. The late-13th-century north arcade of four bays has been preserved intact.

The north aisle contains an original piscina in its east wall. Heraldic glass in a north-east window was still in existence at the end of the 18th century and was thought to date from the time of Henry III.

The south wall of the nave previously contained two large 14th-century windows, the jambs of which have been preserved. The former nave roof was of low pitch and at some period, perhaps after the Reformation, small square-headed windows had been inserted below the eaves. The chancel had a square-headed east window, probably of the 16th century or later. All these features were swept away in 1876.

In 1832 the chancel had been repaired, and in general the mid-19th century reports on the fabric were satisfactory. A drawing of 1875 shows that the church was fitted with box pews and a three-decker pulpit, while the low plaster ceilings to the nave and chancel were divided by an elliptical arch carrying the royal arms.

The rebuilding of 1876, cost approximately £3,000. The tower and the north arcade were left in position and the north aisle was reconstructed on its old foundations, using some of the original masonry. The rest of the church was rebuilt, the walls being of granite and the style Decorated. A vestry was added on the north side of the chancel. The floors were lowered, the roofs raised, the tower arch was opened up, a gallery was removed, and a parapet was added to the tower. An organ was installed and the interior of the church was refitted, with chairs to take the place of pews. In 1909 a new organ was installed. The oak chancel fittings and the tower screen were given as a memorial of the Second World War.

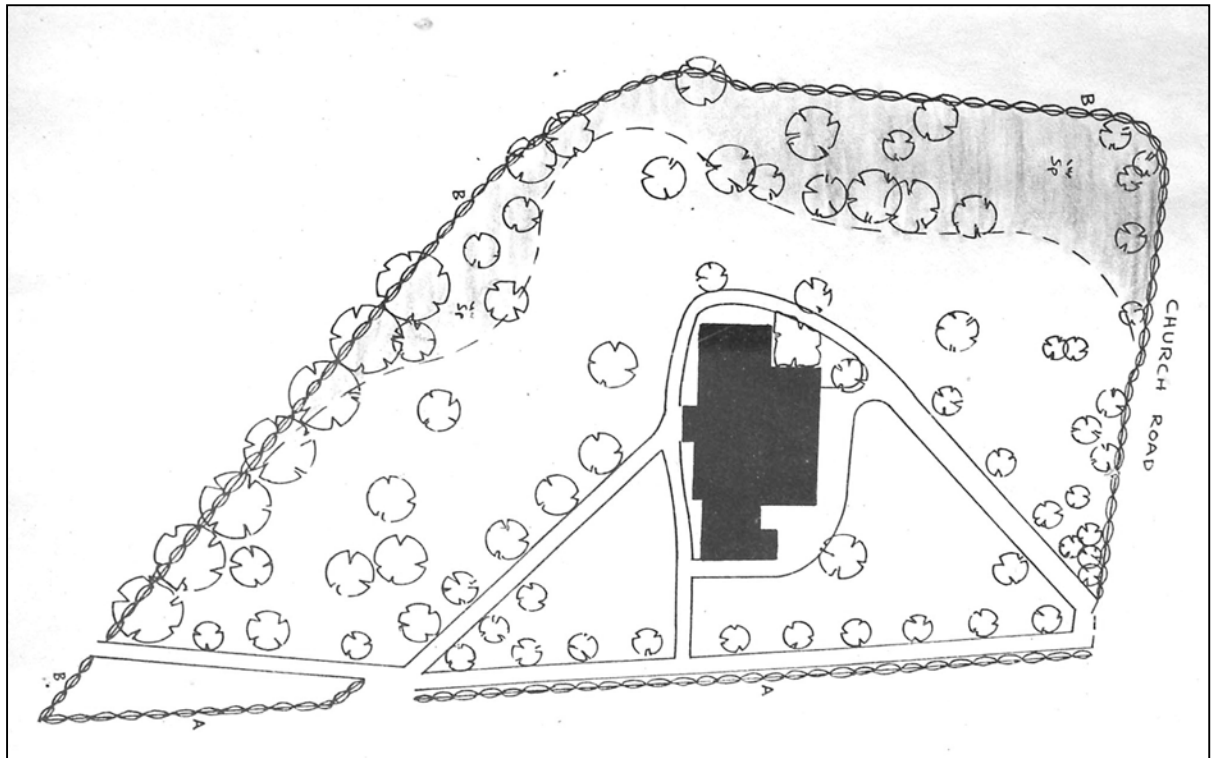

There were formerly numerous inscribed floor slabs dating from the 18th century. Many of them were taken up and used to pave the tower in 1876. Dedicated mural tablets and the windows now in the church have been transcribed, as also plaques commemorating the extension to the churchyard in 1922. There are six bells: (i) 1909, in memory of the Revd. W. J. Packe; (ii), (iv), and (v) 1785, by Edward Arnold of Leicester and St. Neots; (iii) 1625; (vi) recast with (ii) in 1898, undated but thought to have been by John of Stafford of Leicester c. 1340. The original five bells were re-hung in 1898. The church registers begin in 1687 and are complete.

About the Project

The recording of the monumental inscriptions inside and outside the church was undertaken as a summer project for the University of the Third Age, (U3A) Great Glen Family History Group in 2006. All care has been taken to ensure accuracy of the transcription, however a visit to the church or churchyard to check with the original inscriptions is recommended.

Words from many inscriptions were unable to be read for reasons such as broken stones, writing worn away through time etc., and so some blank spaces occur in the transcriptions. The aim was to record the words exactly as they are found on the stone – so variations in spelling are a common occurrence.

Some of the very old graves were transcribed and published in 1798 in a book called 'The History and Antiquities of Leicestershire' by Nichols and this can be seen at the County Record Office.
